THE INFORMER

PART I

Aylin leads a wild, independent life in Berlin and is anxious to start her legal career. However, the young woman also has an extensive police record. She is offered the chance to erase her criminal record by the ambitious narcotics officers Jan and Hannah. They ask Aylin to become an informer and win over the trust of Musab – a drug smuggler. From him Aylin is supposed to obtain information about his next large drug deal. A dangerous game begins between Musab and Aylin, driven by mutual distrust and fascination for one another. But Aylin also gets too close to Jan, the police investigator. She finds herself torn between the two men and her true identity could be revealed at any time. In the end she can only rely on her intuition ...

PART II

THE LISBON CASE – It is Aylin's second case as an undercover investigator: when the impulsive law student gets a call from her distraught sister Elif, she immediately knows that the detectives Hannah and Jan are behind it. They are working a case on money laundering and financing a terrorist group. The ostensible mastermind behind the operation, the renowned and well connected lawyer Engelhardt, has thus far escaped arrest because he managed to identify all attempts made by the police to infiltrate his organisation. Aylin is their best and last chance to catch him. Blackmailed into compliance she has no other option but to go undercover. There she finds herself under fire from both sides, fighting for trust, power and the question whether morality and honesty are the same thing.
