EVERGLADES
River of Grass – that's what Everglades means. One of the largest wetlands on our planet is a puzzle of different fascinating habitats and home to thousands of species such as alligators, the elusive Florida panther and the delicate Key deer.

GATES OF THE ARCTIC
Bears, moose and an endless wilderness: The Gates of the Arctic National Park in the North of Alaska is one of the last untamed places on our planet.

GRAND CANYON
Carved over millions of years the Grand Canyon is probably the most famous natural wonder on our planet. Uncounted visitors come each year but what really happens between rim and river has never been told.

OLYMPIC
Out of the vast expanse of the Pacific Ocean rises the Olympic peninsula. Its rugged coastline, rain drenched forests and high summits are teaming with wildlife.

SAGUARO
The Saguaro National Park is one of the newest in the US – a diverse habitat between heaven and hell with more species than any other desert in North America, but why?

GREAT SMOKY MOUNTAINS
North America's most frequented National Park, with over 9 million visitors each year has a lot more to offer than flower pilgrimages in spring and the colourful trees in autumn.

YELLOWSTONE
Few places are as special and unique as Yellowstone National Park – the world's first national park. A wilderness jewel of vast forests and wide-open valleys, home to large bison herds, wolf packs and grizzly bears.

YOSEMITE
Yosemite National Park is a place of superlatives: with towering cliffs and giant sequoias, home to coyotes, black bears and the most elusive of all: the bobcat.
