POLIZEI

FEDERAL POLICE OFFICER THORSTEN FALKE

FALKE – THE WRATH OF GOD

A young couple enjoys the first warm day of the year, until – as if from nowhere – the corpse of a young man falls into their swimming pool. The investigation leads Thorsten Falke from the body's location to the close-by airport.

FALKE – CRIME SCENES: EVIL GROUND

A man is found brutally murdered in a rural part of Lower Saxony: Arash Naderi has only recently migrated to Germany from his native Iraq. Is this a case of politically motivated murder then, detectives Julia Grosz and Thorsten Falke wonder? Maybe the deceased has been the victim of a racist hate crime? But the investigation leads them in a different direction, it is not Naderi's heritage that has painted a bulls-eye on his back, but his job. The man worked as a driver for a natural gas company and had uncovered an environmental scandal.

FEDERAL POLICE OFFICER THORSTEN FALKE

Federal Police Officer Thorsten Falke, played by Wotan Wilke Möhring, grew up in the Hamburg suburb named Billstedt. As a very young man he had to decide which side of the law he would like to be on. Falke decided on a career within the police force and sees the struggle against crime as something personal. He knows the laws of the street from his youth and this often helps him in his investigations today.

Officer Thorsten Falke is single, as he made a difficult decision between career and family. According to him, both are not compatible. He has a 14-year-old son from an affair he once had with a married woman, who doesn't know who his real father is. Falke lives on his own, although every now and again he is visited by an old alley cat, who Falke named Elliot.

FACING THE HEAT

Another car in flames in a wealthy district of Hamburg, by now an almost routine occurrence. But this time things are very different: someone dies. Federal Police Officer Thorsten Falke assumes investigations into the case.

BLOODY IDYLL

Their second case leads police officers Thorsten Falke and Katharina Lorenz to the North Sea island of Langeoog. A brutal murder has shocked the idyll of the tiny isle: a corpse in the dunes, adjacent to a distraught, blood-smeared teenager.

COLD START

A gas explosion claims the lives of a slave trader and two police officers. Together with their colleague, Jan Katz, Falke and Lorenz begin their investigations, but find themselves confronted by a wall of silence.

HAPPY EASTER, FALKE

Hamburg, during the Easter holidays. A charity event, held to collect donations for refugees, is attacked by a group of political activists. Almost 80 guests are held hostage, including police officer Katharina Lorenz.

THE SYRIAN WAR

The corpse of a German Syrian has been found in a park not far from the town of Oldenburg. Thorsten Falke's and Katharina Lorenz' investigations reveal that the deceased had seemingly been tortured shortly before his death …

BURNT

Federal Police Officers Falke and Lorenz shadow a man suspected of working with forged passports for a gang of people traffickers. When Falke tries to arrest the man, he resists and attempts to flee.
